Bharathidasan University, established in February 1982, was named after the great revolutionary Tamil Poet, Bharathidasan. The University has a number of academic departments and supporting facilities. The university has made rapid march in research achievements in a number of arts and science disciplines. Centre for Climate Change Research (CCCR) was established on 7th March 2017 under Department of Environmental Biotechnology, School of Environmental Sciences to create awareness about Climate Change issues and to find out solution through research in biotechnological approaches in environment and health. Faculties are engaged in diverse research areas such as Insect Molecular Biology, Eco-toxic genomics, Environmental Remote Sensing, Bioremediation and Nanobiotechnology, Plant Metabolomics, Chemical Ecology, Water and Solid Waste Management and Biomaterials. The department has got several research projects from national, international funding agencies like DBT, DST, UGC, ICMR, CSIR, DRDO, MoEF, BRNS, UNU Japan, World Bank, OPCF Hong Kong etc.,

ABOUT CONFERENCE

Impacts of climate change on human health are critical issues on existing global environmental condition. According to WHO (2015), environment and health address all the physical, chemical and biological factors external to a person, which, combined with all the related factors are so integral in bringing about an impact on man's behavior. The matrix of environment and health deal with all the human-health-related diseases due to pollution of water (gastrointestinal, nephrological disorders, etc.), air (respiratory disorders etc.), soil (loss of biodiversity and poor sanitation), and vector-borne diseases, etc.,. It is our goal to prevent various human behavior related diseases and create dependable health supportive environments. In view of this objective, therefore, the conference focuses on creating awareness among all the public and private stake-holders to maintain a better environment for their healthy life.

INVITATION

Dear Researchers / Students,
 Climate constitutes an indispensable matrix affecting human health. The current Physico-chemical quality of the Environment is playing a key role in the transmission of a large number of deadly and/or debilitating diseases. While on one hand, the world is facing a tough situation with several non-communicable illnesses like cancers, diabetes etc., on the other hand, the vector-borne diseases like dengue, Chikungunya and West Nile Virus have been intensified both in time and space. The national conference will hopefully provide a unique opportunity to bring all the possible knowledge about the climate change issues. With kindest regards, and looking forward to having your active participation in the conference.

Yours Sincerely
Organizing Secretary
